

What has helped you be successful in your career?

So as far as the skills that keep me going and keep me successful in my career, I think the most important thing is curiosity and making sure that you're excited and have a sense of wonder about what you're doing.

What I would most credit my success to in my career with respect to game development and using Unity, and then teaching it to others, is my academic career that came before and also having learnt computer science and programming when I was at university.

Communication is critical to every single aspect of what we do. The best way to succeed is to find other people and work with them. Looking at a problem and thinking of ways to solve it, and if the first one doesn't work I'll try something else. I think that's probably the thing that's helped me most in my career is the fact I just really enjoy solving problems and learning new things. And if you're having fun the rest comes a lot more easily, I find.
